Marine Corps Officer Programs

Recruiter: Captain Geoffry Genna
2021 Western Avenue, Suite 101A
Albany, NY 12203

Website: www.MarineOfficer.com

About Us: There are two paths to becoming a Marine Corps Officer: The platoon Leaders Class is the most popular route to becoming a Marine Corps Officer. For college freshmen and sophomores, the program consists of two six-week training sessions between school years at Officer Candidates School in Quantico, VA. For college juniors, it's one 10-week training session. You are paid for your summer training, so it's essentially like having a summer job. You can enter the program and complete the training with no obligation to join the Marine Corps after graduation. It allows you to see if leading Marines is what you wish to do after you graduate from college without having to be committed to doing so. If you successfully complete the training and graduate from college you can be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant and will then attend The Basic School in Quantico, VA. College seniors and graduates who desire to become an officer in the Marine Corps go through one 10-week session at Officer Candidate School through a program called Officer Candidates Course. Upon Completion you will move immediately to The Basic School, also in Quantico, VA, and begin your training as a Second Lieutenant.
