Title: "Building Common Ground: How Ethnic and Women's & Gender Studies Teach Social Justice Through Social Change."

Description: Both Ethnic and Women's & Gender Studies, as fields of inquiry emerging from the social movements of the sixties, share a foundational perspective about the nature of intellectual production as part of a larger project of social change and social justice. This brown bag gathers together some voices from each field to look at the content of Ethnic and Women's & Gender Studies courses and the various approaches people use to teach the subject material. Each of us represents a specific angle or framework and our dialogue will focus on what it is we think we are doing, how it is we do it, and why we do it?
